Measure M

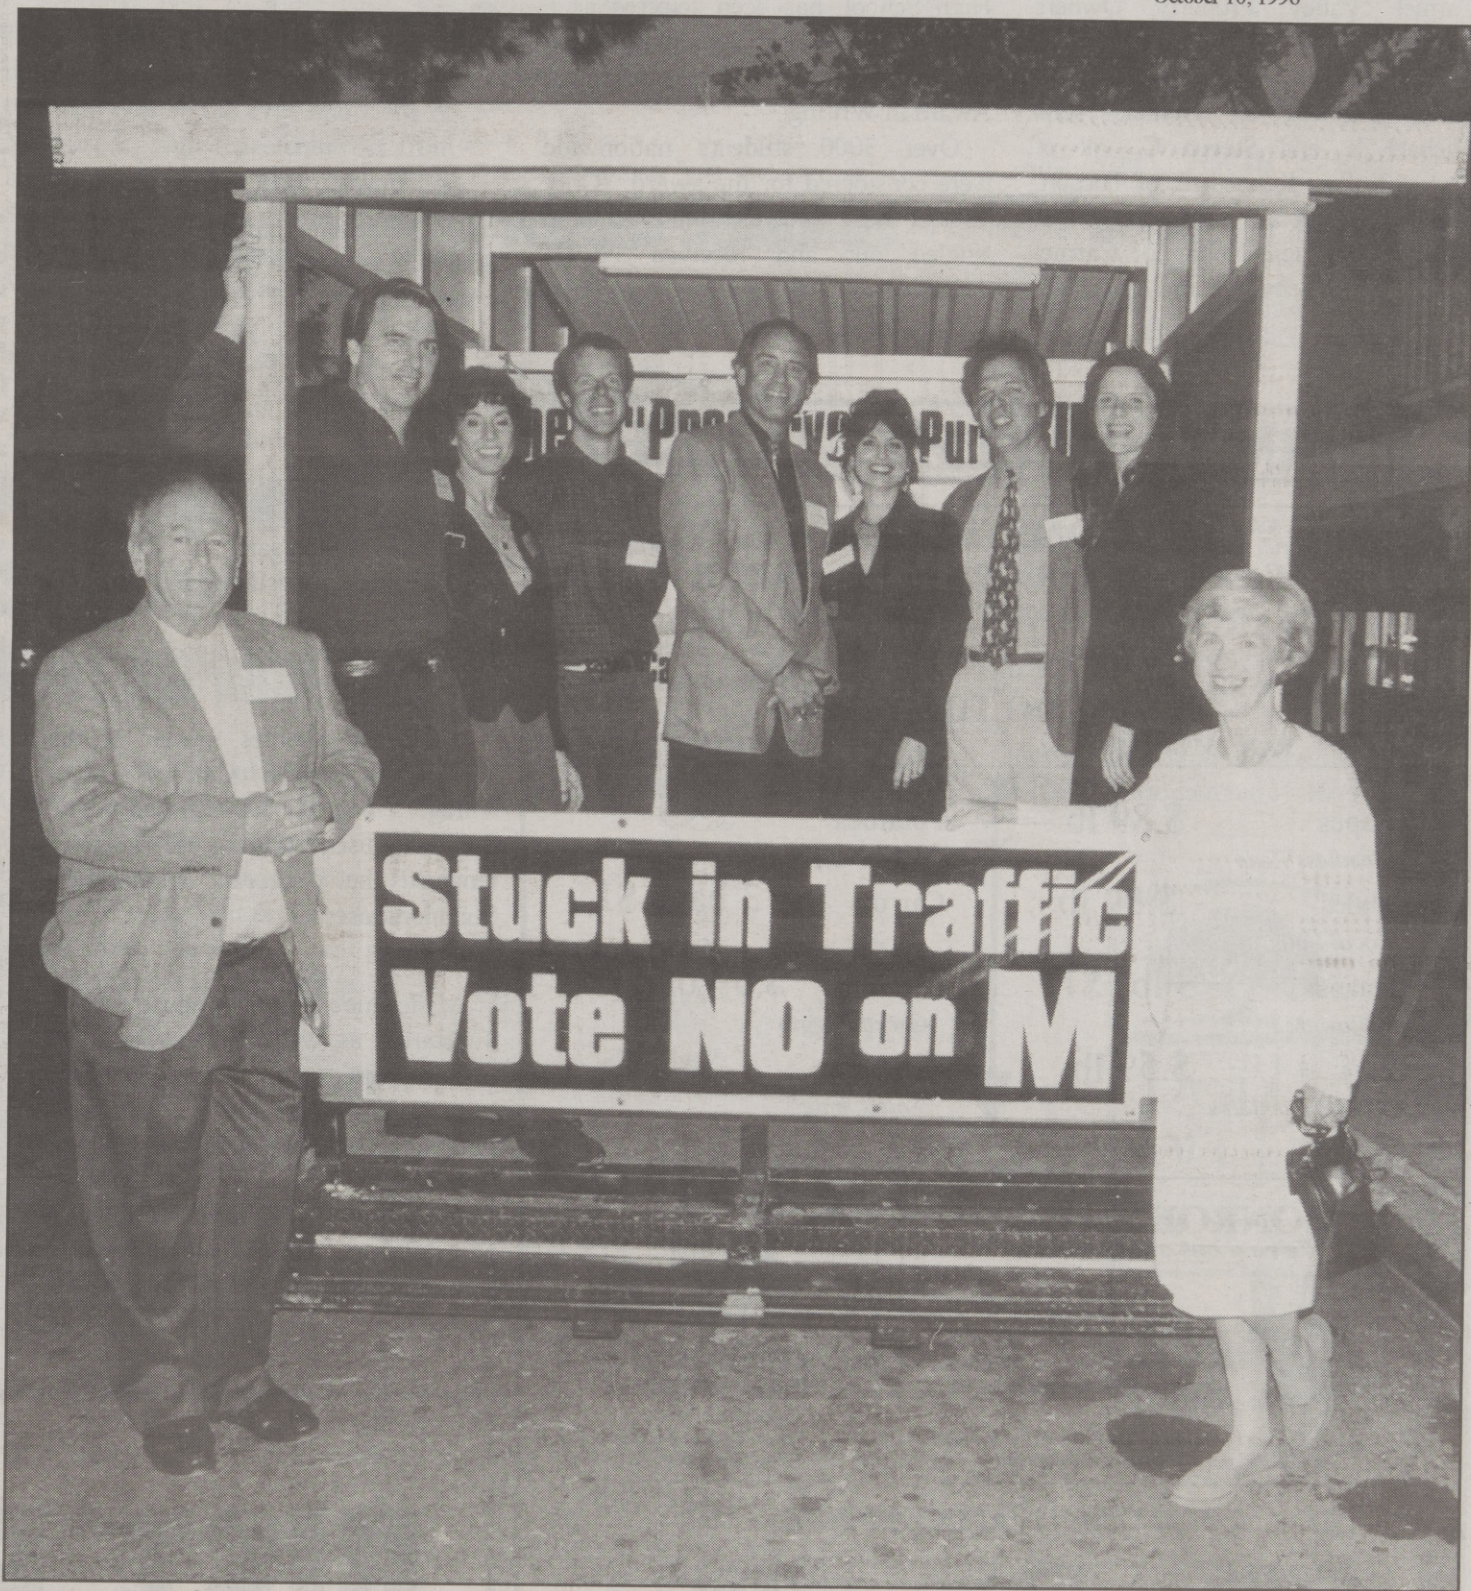

Opponents and Supporters of the Rancho San Carlos Project Want Your Vote

By Elizabeth Cowley

The project known as the Santa Lucia Preserve and/or the Rancho San Carlos Subdivision will come before the voters in November as Measure M. The project includes 350 residential lots, a hotel, golf course and 18,000 acres of open space on a total of 20,000 acres.

The Citizens Against the Santa Lucia Subdivision Committee kicked off its fundraising efforts with a $99 per plate dinner and silent auction held on October 2 at Casanova's Restaurant in Carmel. About fifty people attended but committee member Michelle Pollack said that many people sent in contributions even though they could not attend. Zan Henson, committee council, said the committee doesn't have much money but, "The plan is to get the word out - to appeal to the innate good sense of the electorate. This is not the best deal, we can get better."

The Citizens Against the Santa Lucia Subdivision is getting the word out through debates with Rancho San Carlos representatives, advertising, and by driving a truck and trailer around in rush hour traffic which is covered with signs including "Stuck in Traffic? Vote no on M." Bruce Dormody, Citizens Against the Santa Lucia Subdivision committee

OBITUARIES

JUANITA COLLEEN HOHLER

Juanita Colleen Hohler, of Carmel Valley, died at the age of 76, on October 1, 1996.

She was the owner of the Golden Fleece Yarn Shop at Mid-Valley Shopping Center for 21 years. She served as a voter registrar in the Village and was a member of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

Survivors are her husband of 53 years, Kenneth E. Hohler, sons Michael R. and Steven C., all of Carmel Valley, Kenneth E. of Tucson, daughters Valerie Lynn Jones of Marina and Angie Hohler of Carmel Valley, 6 grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Private services were under the direction of the Paul Mortuary.

Memorial contributions are suggested to the American Diabetes Association or Kidney Foundation of Northern California.

John Pfeiffer Receives English Award

John Pfeiffer, a senior at Carmel High School, has been selected as a recipient of the 1996 National Council of Teachers of English Achievement Award in Writing.

Over 3000 students nationwide were considered for the award. Only 13% of those students nominated were singled out and received NCTE Achievement recognition. Each nominee had to submit two examples of his writing which was then evaluated by high school and college judges.

This is the second consecutive year that a CHS student has received this outstanding writing award.

Madeleine Shaules Takes Over the Summerhouse

Ms. Shaules, who prefers to be called Madeleine, came to the United States 25 years ago from Switzerland, where she studied culinary arts at Neuchatel. She has owned and operated the popular Classic Burger for several years, but brings a new concept in family dining to Summerhouse.

"Summerhouse is a family restaurant," she said. "We offer ethnic foods on special event evenings, and I hope Sunday brunch will be especially attractive to our clientele."

Madeleine Shaules, owner of the Classic Burger in Carmel Valley Village, recently purchased The Summerhouse restaurant. Shaules has renamed the restaurant Madeleine's Summerhouse.

Madeleine's Summerhouse offers vegetarian as well as meat and fish dishes. Wine, beer and non-alcoholic beverages are also served. Madeleine will cater weddings, anniversaries and birthdays.

Madeleine's Summerhouse is open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and for brunch on Sundays.

Great Meat Dishes Are No Mystery

Butcher John Monroe Tells Us Why

There are many reasons why knowledgeable people buy their meats and poultry from John Monroe, who owns the old-fashioned butcher shop in the middle of Randy Randazzo's Carmel Valley Market in the Village.

For the lost souls who shop for price alone, you might get select rib eye steak for $2.79 or $3.19 or $2.59. That makes John's price of $3.49 for rib eye sound outrageous. That is until you bite into that tough bargain meat from the supermarket.

"I buy and sell only the best 'prime' meats ...", says John Monroe. A butcher with decades of experience in buying, cutting and trimming meats, John explains that most stores sell only the bottom three grades of meat: 3-roll (seldom identified in ads); Select, (the lowest grade of rated meats); Choice (older, tougher meats, well fed for slaughter); and Prime (the very best of younger stock, bred and raised for eating quality).

A good piece of Prime tri-tip (cowboy filet) may be more tender than a high priced Select tenderloin. "And that's how it goes ...", John explained to The Sun.

What makes John Monroe Meat's extra special is his acumen about even prime meats. By touch, smell and feel, John can tell you how a certain cut of meat will taste. For the wise who are John's regular customers, John knows and remembers their favorite cuts, from flank to filet mignon; John will order special cuts for his customers.

Monroe Meats is also the only source for the special flavor of ranch grown turkeys and chickens.

On occasions John prepares his own sausages; links and patties. Yes, the sausage is delicious and there is never enough.

"There will always be people who think they can get good meat from the big stores, neatly wrapped in poly wrap, bright red in color ... and when they get home they find it tastes like the poly/styrofoam package ...", commented one of the customers in line at John's meat counter.

Another customer said, "I laugh when people tell me what a great chef I am; because ... I know the reason the meat tastes so good is because it is prime meat carefully chosen, butchered and trimmed by John ..."

Along with his wife, Vi, and longtime assistant Peter Glod, John holds forth the finest tradition of Carmel Valley. He provides us with better meat than you will find at any other store in the area. Only the very best of restaurants even buy the "prime" meats that John offers every day to his customers.

Whether you live in Big Sur, Carmel, Pebble Beach or Carmel Valley, there is no better source for consistently top quality "prime" meats.

A careful look at the wall behind the white porcelain refrigerated meat counter offers a collage of baby to adult famous and infamous customers.

So, when you give up on trying to save a few pennies, to save yourself the embarrassment of serving a "select" or "choice" roast; or just want to enjoy the non-mystery of great meats; go stand in the line at Monroe's Meats.

John's weekly ads are always on page two of The Carmel Valley Sun.

WHAT'S NEXT?

by Mel Vercoe

Maybe it's a story that should be told. It was purely an accident. A young man, driving a borrowed, uninsured vehicle, knocked me off my bike on North Main Street, breaking the femur bone in my right hind leg. I could hear it crunch, when I tried to move. My first thoughts were, how lucky I was that I had filled out a durable power of attorney and had just mailed in the last payment on a funeral plan.

An ambulance crew soon wanted to know which of the two hospitals I preferred. I quickly chose the one I hadn't been in, for some surgery a few years ago, and I'll tell you why. The invention of a device called a catheter did a lot for everybody, doctors, nurses, bed pan carriers, patients and bed maker-uppers. It can be easily and painlessly inserted into the proper body opening by simply lubricating said body opening with a sterile lubricant, which can be bought in tubes in drug stores.

Well, the nurse or an assistant may have been following the directions that came with the catheter kit, using the lubricant enclosed in a plastic envelope, similar to envelopes used for ketchup in popular fast food restaurants. This means dabbing some lubricant on the surface of the end of the catheter, which does nothing toward lubricating the human tissue inside the passageway. Anyway, my screams of pain were heard by a doctor who was standing in the hallway. He inserted some lubricant, which made the insertion painless, and I stopped screaming.

So, I told the ambulance crew to take me to the other hospital, but, guess what. The lady in charge of catheter insertions put me through the same ordeal that I'd gone through at the first hospital, only this time there wasn't any passing doctor coming to my aid. The moral to this story is just a suggestion. Carry a little tube of lubricant at all times.

YOUR WORLD AND MINE

by Araby Colton

"WHEN YOU'VE SEEN ONE REDWOOD ..."

Remember? That's our former president, Ronald Reagan. He's talking about our redwoods, those incredible trees, the most massive living things on the planet, our special California pride.

We seem to be in the midst of a real donnybrook over these trees. We're seeing protesting lovelies, chained to monstrous tree trunks, hundreds of "environmentalists" being trotted off to jail. And a Pennsylvania judge has just given permission to a Texas S & L tycoon to "salvage" dead and dying trees from the Headwaters Forest, a virgin old growth redwood forest in northern California.

So, as we used to say, what's all the shootin' for? President Clinton approved salvage logging in August, 1995. It seems reasonable.

But it's not. The dead and dying wood in old growth forests is essential to the life of the forest. It's a crucial part of the self-sustaining, self-renewing ecosystem that is a forest. Remember, these forests have been doing their stuff, successfully, for thousands of years. We should do so well.

Lichens, for instance, falling to earth from the canopy overhead, release nitrogen into the soil. Small mammals, eating the fungus, disperse nitrogen through the forest.

New trees take root in the thick, nutrient and moisture rich dead wood of fallen trees.

Dead trees, falling in streams, slow down the rush of the waters, facilitating the spawning of salmon, steelhead and golden trout. Midges, mayflies, snails and crayfish provide food for fish, otters, raccoons, birds and other animals.

Trees struck by disease, fire or lightening, that remain standing, provide insects as food for birds and nests for squirrels.

Salvage logging must be considered a serious threat to our forests. As columnist Alexander Cockburn has said, "The salvage rider has opened to the chainsaw millions of acres of previously protected forest, from Alaska to Mississippi, under legislation against which there can be no appeal."

And how important is it to save the forests, really?

Our scientists consider forests absolutely essential to the health of the planet. The old growth forests help maintain climate, stabilize soils and water resources, provide safe habitat for animal species, control soil erosion, regulate the flow of streams, moderate floods and droughts, take carbon dioxide from the atmosphere, and produce the oxygen all animals need.

In fact we couldn't survive without forests.

But we're losing them. Of the some 6.2 billion hectares of forest, covering half the ice free land area of the planet ten thousand years ago, we now have, according to Worldwatch, no more than 1.5. In the United States, excluding Alaska (now, however, being heavily logged) less than 5 percent of our primary forest is intact.

Virtually all of Europe's original forests are gone. Tropical rainforests are being lost by 50 million acres a year. Brazil's Atlantic forests are now one percent of their original extent.

Deforestation is contributing to global warming, and to the build-up of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. We are losing tons of topsoil through our tree cutting programs.

Vice president Gore has called the salvage logging rider "the biggest mistake we have made". Perhaps he and the President will consider repealing it?

Defacing of Yes on Measure M Signs

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

During their petition signing drive, the opponents of Measure M made a lot to do about their first amendment rights. Now these same self-appointed champions of freedom of speech are busily going around defacing the "Yes on M" signs of those who support the Rancho San Carlos project. Signs on private property are being torn down, spray painted and pasted over with crudely drawn "no" stickers. They seem to think that freedom of speech applies only if you support their view.

This conduct is not only offensive, it says a lot about the principles of the certain opponents of "Measure M".

FORA Is Potter's Issue Not Davi's

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

As early as March of this year, Dave Potter gave us a wake-up call that the "mother of all subdivisions" in the shape of the Fort Ord reuse plan was on the horizon. With many other development and environmental concerns on the table, few of us paid attention. Once the draft environmental impact report was out, however, we began to realize how critical Potter's early warning about this massive development was.

Jeff Davi has now begun to claim the Fort Ord issue as his own. Those of us who have stood in line to make public comments against this mammoth development before the FORA Board have yet to see Davi appear at these public meetings, adding his voice to ours in public protest.

Dave Potter is the voice for rational regional planning to preserve the quality of life not only in the fifth district but for Monterey County. Join me in voting for Dave Potter on November 5.

Davi Has a Plan

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

In the 1970s I worked for the State of California at a time when its records system was being converted to the Problem-Oriented Records system (POR). You may have heard it called by any of a number of other names. It is the idea that a goal is set, objectives devised to meet that goal, and plans made to meet the objectives. It involves periodic review to determine whether you are making progress to achieve your goals, and to allow changes when necessary. This system is commonly in use everywhere in the administration of both business and government.

We're now on the downhill slope of the 1990s. Monterey County continues to operate out of the dark ages, without long term goals, without reasonable objectives, and with constantly changing plans. Progress is determined by not much more than opinion, subject to political whims and fancies.

For the first time, there is someone championing a county government with identifiable goals, measurable objectives, and plans capable of providing accurate review. Jeff Davi calls this his "Vision" of Monterey County government. I call it sensible. We can't afford the "more-of-the-same" offered by the status quo and promoted by Mr. Davi's opponent. That's one reason why I'm voting for Jeff Davi.

Ileene M. Crane-Franks
Carmel Valley

Why Is It Always Money With Davi?

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Why is it always money with Jeff Davi's supporters? First, his wealthy family and sponsors make sure he has more money than anyone in Fifth District history. Then, even while criticism of his spending mounts, his supporters start bragging about how much richer he is than his opposition. This strategy hit a new low in the allegations about Dave Potter's Jacks Peak house, made in a letter to your paper by Joe Battilega.

The fact, well known to Mr. Battilega at the time he wrote his misleading letter, was that the house was in escrow. It sold on September 27, with all bills and taxes paid.

If wealth was all that counted in a candidate, Perot would be President. I'm voting for Dave Potter because he understands that out of control development is ruining our quality of life and because he has the experience to be an effective representative for us on the Board of Supervisors.

Davi Embraces New Ideas

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

In your September 19, 1996 issue of the Sun you covered the debates between Jeff Davi and Dave Potter. Jeff Davi said he supported injecting storm water into the Seaside Aquifer during the rainy season rather than allow it to run out to sea.

This is an outstanding idea that should be explored. It may be possible to store as much as 2000 acre feet for use during the summer. This could be enough to help bring the Carmel River back to life.

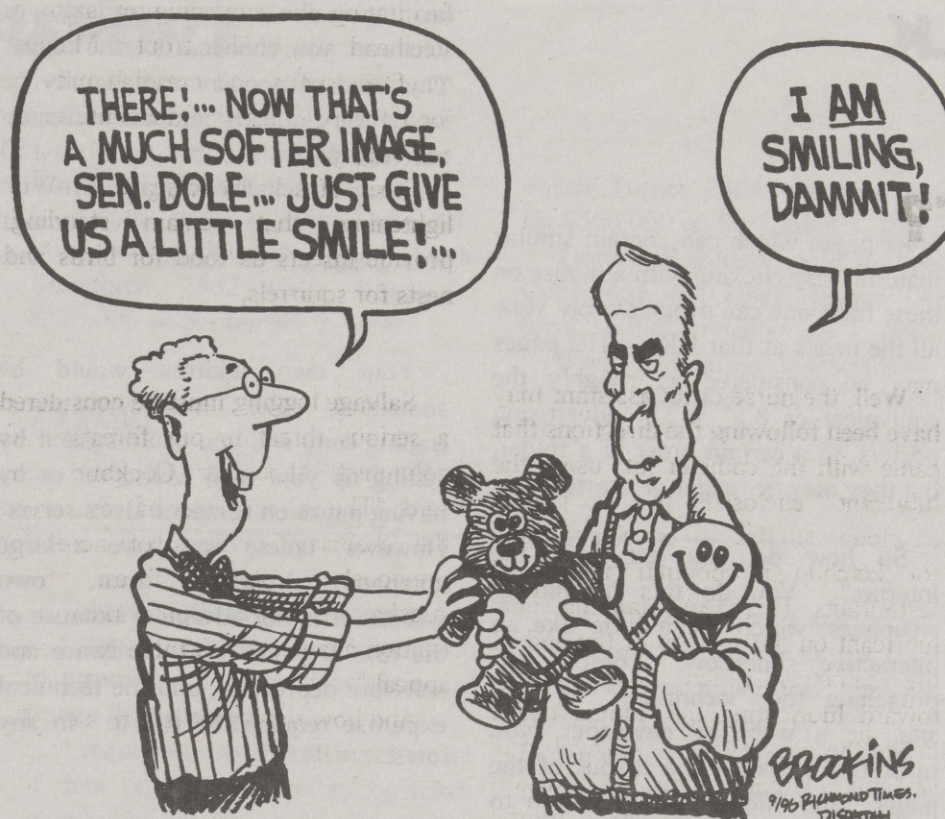

Since reading the article in the Sun I have learned that the pumps and pipes are on line so the capital investment would be minimal. I am sure we will hear more about this plan in the months to come.

Jeff Davi's support of this new water plan is a good example of his alertness and open mind for new ideas. He would be an asset to the Board of Supervisors. He is intelligent, aggressive and is looking ahead to see what can be done to improve our environment and our way of life in the 5th District. Vote for Jeff on November 5.

Thanks for covering the debate.

Internet: New frontier in the snake-oil business. Part 3.

The Internet, apart from the part called the World Wide Web (www), is a deadly dull place where files of information are transferred in the equivalent of brown paper wrappers. The exciting part, the www, is a collection of what are known as web sites all connected into a vast worldwide computer network and these sites can be "browsed" or "virtually visited" by anyone having a computer/modem, a connection to the Internet, and a software program called a browser, which allows one to view text and images and a software program called a browser, which allows one to view text and images (color opictures). In essence what happens here is that, when the browser is directed to the address (usually called the URL) of a particular web page, it sends a packet of information to the webserver, which has that page, requesting it to send to it a copy of the home page - the first one. When that page arrives the browser displays whatever had been set up on it - which is usually text and still pictures, though sound and video are now starting to appear. Odors are predicted to appear next on the menu so don't throw away that old clothes pin, especially for the hucksters' offerings. The first page that arrives at your browser will have what are known as "hyperlinks" to other pages which can contain similar material. By clicking with a mouse on these links one can progressively view all the pages at that URL. The pages may be considered as roughly the equivalent of 8.5" x 11" advertising posters, in a certain order in a folder, but they may be longer or shorter.

So how do you get "on" the Internet? You do this by having webpages, which are a little like an interactive slideshow. Before approaching the "webmaster" of any site, or a webpage developer, you must first consider the layout of the pages: the information you wish to convey, colors, backgrounds, text color and size, pictures of the products you wish to promote, and embellishments of various kinds. What constitutes good webpage design is very much a matter of argument and is still being developed. In addition, one has to consider the sequence of pages to be presented and how they are linked together. Forms can be set up that ask the potential client "visiting" the webpages specific questions about their needs and to take orders. However, at this time it is not advisable to give credit card numbers in such pages or in e-mail; this situation is changing rapidly.

There are two basic kinds of webpages, the first being a "virtual directory" address on a website, and the second, being one's own address. For example, if your company is called Acme Trading Co., and you want a virtual directory address on a website called abc.com whose URL is <http://www.abc.com/> then the address of your pages would be <http://www.abc.com/acme-trading>, or whatever you choose after the .com/. This kind of account can usually be set up very quickly and the minimum cost should be as little as $100-150 for setup and display for a year. With this arrangement, it is obvious that your pages are on someone else's web server.

Your own address would be something like <http://www.acme-trading.com/> and you could have it by setting up your own webserver or by having pages on someone else's server. However, unless you have a large company, running your own webserver is not advisable because of the rate at which both hardware and software depreciate, and the technical expertise required to run it. In any case, the name acme-trading must first be registered on the Internet and it must be unique i.e. not already taken. Registration can take several weeks, and $100 is payable for a two year registration; thereafter the cost is $50 per annum and both are payable to Internic - the organization that is responsible for maintaining the registry. These figures do not include the cost of searching and registering. This route, i.e. via your own address, should cost you from about $200 and upwards on top of the less expensive account, and including Internic's $100 - or a minimum of around $300 and upwards. Substantial pages with up to about a thousand words, half-dozen images, a form, and your own address, should cost no more than about $500 for setup and display for a year - which is peanuts in the real advertising world. Display for the second and subsequent years should cost little more than half of this figure.

The Functions of an Escrow

Protecting the Buyer, Seller and Lender

Buying or selling a home (or other piece of real property) usually involves the transfer of large sums of money. It is imperative that the transfer of these funds and related documents from one party to another be handled in a neutral, secure and knowledgeable manner. For the protection of buyer, seller and lender, the escrow process was developed.

As a buyer or seller, you want to be certain all conditions of sale have been met before property and money change hands. The technical definition of an escrow is a transaction where one party engaged in the sale, transfer or lease of real or personal property with another person delivers a written instrument, money or other items of value to a neutral third person, called an escrow agent or escrow holder. This third person holds the money or items for disbursement upon the happening of a specified event or the performance of a specified condition.

Simply stated, the escrow holder impartially carries out the written instructions given by the principals. This includes receiving funds and documents necessary to comply with those instructions, completing or obtaining required forms and handling final delivery of all items to the proper parties upon the successful completion of the escrow.

The escrow must be provided with the necessary information to close the transaction. This may include loan documents, tax statements, fire and

REAL ESTATE REPORT

Carol Jensen Root

The following real estate sales were reported for the period of September 1, 1996 through September 7, 1996:

CARMEL VALLEY

Jerome Moiso sold to Patrick and Gina Phinny 25 Los Robles for $1,250,000 on September 6, 1996.

PEBBLE BEACH

Gerald and Catherine Dube sold to James Tunney and Linda Broughton 2962 Club Road for $530,000 on September 2, 1996.

CARMEL

Ellis and Bernice Ellison sold to Susan Turner 24695 Dolores Street for $560,000 on September 3, 1996.

Gordon Robertson sold to Leotta Cummings 3600 High Meadow Drive for $220,000 on September 4, 1996.

Floyd and Susan Johnson sold to Marjorie Chomiak 24520 Outlook Drive for $310,000 on September 5, 1996.

other insurance policies, title insurance policies, terms of sale and any seller-assisted financing, and requests for payment for various services to be paid out of escrow funds.

If the transaction is dependent on arranging new financing, it is the buyer's or the buyer's agent's responsibility to make the necessary arrangements. Documentation of the new loan agreement must be in the hands of the escrow holder before the transfer of property can take place. A real estate agent can help identify appropriate lending institutions.

When all the instructions in the escrow have been carried out, the closing can take place. At this time, all outstanding funds are collected and fees - such as title insurance premiums, real estate commissions, termite inspection charges - are paid. Title to the property is then transferred under the terms of the escrow instructions and appropriate title insurance is issued.

Payment of funds at the close of escrow should be in the form acceptable to the escrow, since out-of-town and personal checks can cause days of delay in processing the transaction.

The following items represent a typical list of what an escrow holder does and does not do:

The Escrow Holder:

*serves as the neutral "stakeholder" and the communications link to all parties in the transaction;

* prepares escrow instructions;
* requests a preliminary title search to determine the present condition of title to the property;

* requests a beneficiary's statement if debt or obligation is to be taken over by the buyer;

* complies with the lender's requirements, specified in the escrow agreement;

* receives purchase funds from the buyer;

* prepares or secures the deed or other documents related to escrow;

* prorates taxes, interest, insurance and rents according to instructions;

* secures releases of all contingencies or other conditions as imposed on any particular escrow;

* records deeds and any other documents as instructed;

* requests issuance of the title insurance policy;

* closes escrow when all the instructions of buyer and seller have been carried out;

* disburses funds as authorized by instructions, including charges for title insurance, recording fees, real estate commissions and loan payoffs;

* prepares final statements for the parties accounting for the disposition of all funds deposited in escrow. (These are useful in the preparation of tax returns.)

The Escrow Holder does not:

* offer legal advice;

* negotiate the transaction;

* offer investment advice.

member said, "The estimated increase in traffic from principal (Rancho San Carlos) residents and the hotel is approximately 1250 additional car trips per day." Bruce Dormody said that this does not include car trips generated from the guest, caretaker and senior units adding, "Each lot is being sold as a compound - its not just that house but a 4-5 acre lot which will have 3 or 4 different structures on it but they're called senior units or caretaker units."

Tom Gray of Rancho San Carlos said they're trying to get their message out through advertising and direct phone contact with the electorate. Gray said "When people understand Rancho San Carlos - the Santa Lucia Preserve - they come to support the plan. A yes on Measure M means 90% of Rancho San Carlos will be set aside as permanent open space forever with public access and educational programs." Tom Gray added that the project will bring in $10 million annually in property taxes and create 200 new permanent jobs.

Most people in Carmel and Carmel Valley are familiar with the Rancho San Carlos project but the election is county wide so volunteers supporting Measure M have been manning a phone bank focusing on calling people who don't know anything about Rancho San Carlos.

The 18,000 acre Santa Lucia preserve is broken down into two categories. Bruce Dormody said the wild lands will be owned by the developer supported conservancy group and the approximately 6,000 acres of open lands are the accumulation of privately owned lands, essentially residents backyards, and that the open land designation can be changed if 75% of the owners and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors agree. Bruce said "The 6,000 acres of the privately owned lands are going to be practically impossible to manage, it's somebody's house and yard and if they paid $2 million they will do with it what they want to do with it. The way these things are spread out totally fragments one wild land from the next ... that's why we are saying the habitat is fragmented." Bruce Dormody said the Citizens Against the Santa Lucia Subdivision Committee wants a more clustered project in line with the Monterey County General Plan and available water supply.

Yes on Measure M co-chair, Margaret Owings, chats with volunteers at the Yes on Measure M rally held on Friday, October 4 at campaign headquarters.

Tom Gray said, "Clustering is not what Measure M is about - there is not an alternative on the ballot." Gray added, "The project never allows development on 18,000 acres of the property, it doesn't matter where the other 2,000 (acres) happen to be." Gray said Rancho San Carlos has spent over 6 years in the planning process and that all of the regulatory bodies with jurisdiction, including the Board of Supervisors, Department of Health, and the Department of Fish and Game, have approved the plan. Gray said people who disagreed with the project had ample opportunity to voice their concerns during the 13 public hearings.

Several citizen groups have voted to endorse the no on Measure M campaign including the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, the Monterey Chapter of the League of Women Voters and the Carmel River Steelhead Association.

Measure M was brought to a vote through the referendum process which challenged the Board of Supervisors approval of re-zoning approximately 1,150 acres of resource conservation land. Nine hundred and eighty-seven acres were re-zoned to low and medium density residential, 121 acres re-zoned to visitor accommodation uses, 15 acres re-zoned for a general store and recreation use and 12 acres re-zoned to heavy commercial use.

A yes on measure M would reaffirm the Board of Supervisors unanimous decision to re-zone portions of Rancho San Carlos. A no vote on Measure M would overturn the Board of Supervisors zoning changes. Tom Gray said a yes on Measure M is a vote for keeping 28 square miles of permanent open space intact and a no vote is for hodgepodge development as usual. Bruce Dormody said if Measure M fails, Rancho San Carlos would have to come back with a project that would fit entirely within resource conservation zoning where resources come first.

Measure M is not the last obstacle for the Rancho San Carlos project. The Sierra Club has filed a lawsuit challenging the Environmental Impact Report for Rancho San Carlos, the suit was originally scheduled to be heard in September but the judge opted to wait until after the election.

Crucial That Potter is Elected

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

It is crucial that Dave Potter be elected to the Board of Supervisors. The current board is already oriented to unbridled growth; they vote 5-0 on every plan that comes down the pike.

Potter will be a refreshing independent voice on the board where it is urgently needed. At this time, of all times, when not just the Fifth District but the entire County is facing unprecedented pressures for development, someone with Potter's experience on the Monterey City Council and with extensive knowledge on transportation issues, must be elected.

Davi Will Move Hatton Canyon Forward

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Traffic is getting so bad that even local shoppers from Monterey, Pacific Grove, Seaside, Salinas and Marina are fed up with getting caught in gridlock along Hwy. 1 and Carmel Valley Road near the Crossroads and the Rancho.

Dave Potter who is a member of the Transportation Agency of Monterey County (TAMC) representing the City of Monterey has supported traffic improvement but what has he done to improve it? He has consistently voted against the Hatton Canyon bypass. Recently he stated he is for 10 improvements which include widening the present right of way with San Jose type sound barriers. We don't need this encroachment on private property with the accompanying exhaust fumes penetrating this residential neighborhood.

The Hatton Bypass has been determined to be the most environmentally and cost effective solution to this severe traffic problem. The road through the canyon would be the least disruptive during construction to the surrounding neighborhood. Once completed, shopping at the Crossroads would be a pleasure and would be rejuvenated and rise to a level not enjoyed so far.

Jeff Davi supports the Hatton bypass since it is the right thing to do. It will restore the residential neighborhood around the High School. Jeff is new to the political process and therefore can support what is right. Mr. Potter is not in that position.

Questions To Ask Before Voting in November

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Here's a few questions every voter should consider before voting in November:

1. How many promises did Mr. Clinton make during the '92 campaign?
2. How many of these promises did he keep?
3. Did Mr. Clinton sign legislation to increase or decrease our taxes?

SENIOR WATCH

DRUG COMPANIES PUT THE SQUEEZE ON OLDER AMERICANS

In the last seven years, the big drug companies have massively boosted prices of drugs older Americans depend on. Smith Kline raised the price of Tagamet from $55.65 to $92.60 for 60 400mg pills. Bristol-Meyers raised 100 50mg Capotens from $73.04 to $124.33. Wyeth-Ayerst more than doubled the price of 100 .625mg Premarins from $19.57 to $41.98. Hoechst raised Diabeta from $18.30 to $29.35 for 60 5mg tablets. And Boots Pharmaceutical nearly doubled Synthroid from $10.19 to $20 for 100 .05 mg pills. (Prices vary from drugstore to drugstore.) None of these drug companies changed these pills or improved them. They just charge more for the exact same pill. Older Americans are hit hard by these enormous price increases—especially because Medicare doesn't cover prescription drugs, and about half of all older Americans have no insurance to cover drugs.
